MEMORANDUM FOR: [REDACTED], Office of Training

SUBJECT: Rights of CIA in "The Red Interpreter"

1. As suggested by the Office of Security, you have requested the approval of this office to the publication by you of your book "The Red Interpreter".

2. It is our understanding that the book consists at present of four volumes, perhaps best defined as a dictionary of Communist and Soviet usage. You have informed us that the compilation of the book was accomplished solely by you on your own personal time, although certain mechanic stenciling and packaging services were performed by stenographic personnel of the Office of Training and the uncleared personnel pool of the Personnel Office. We also understand that the book is used as a text in one of the Agency training courses and that approximately 200 copies of it are currently in use within the Agency.

3. You have indicated that you would be willing to grant the U. S. Government a non-exclusive royalty free irrevocable non-transferrable license to reproduce the book. In view of this fact we would have no legal objection to your exploitation of the book at your personal expense in any manner that you deem best providing the United States Government is granted a non-exclusive, royalty free irrevocable non-transferrable license to reproduce all or any part thereof. A form of license is appended to this memorandum which we request you execute and return to this office.
